The Foundation's Academic Advisors (university professors and specialist scientists) review the applications by subject and level of studies and grade them at their own free will, assessing achieved and pursued studies of the applicants, as these are described in the application and in the accompanying documentation.

The evaluation criteria set by the Foundation are purely academic. In particular, the following factors are important:

1. The General Point Average, the candidate's ranking and the grades of all individual courses relevant to the candidate's prospective field of study, as well as the ranking of the University from which the candidate has graduated. Additionally, the level of knowledge of foreign languages, especially if it is a requirement for the course. Furthermore, publications in scientific journals and presentations in conferences play an important role in the evaluation procedure, as do any working experience (including internships, residencies, volunteer work).
2. The institutional status, ranking and reputation of the chosen University and that of the chosen programme of study.
3. The candidate's personal statement, where they are requested to justify their choice of field of study, specialisation, chosen programme of study and especially for doctoral studies, their choice of supervisors, as well as their future plans.
4. Regarding doctoral candidates, the subject of their thesis. The originality of the subject chosen, its special scientific interest and how the findings of the research may prove socially beneficial for Cyprus are factors taken into consideration in the evaluation.
5. The letters of reference and their academic reputation.
6. In the field of Industrial Design, the candidates' portfolios, in suitable audiovisual format.
7. During the review process, priority will be given to candidates who have already registered or have secured entry in their preferred course of study.

- Candidates may be called for a telephone interview, if so required by the Academic Advisors.
- The Board of Directors of the Foundation awards the scholarships, taking into account the evaluation of the Academic Advisors and after considering all the parameters regarding the entirety of the eligible candidates. In the case of equal academic achievements of candidates, the socioeconomic criteria may also be taken into consideration for a final decision.
